THE RELIGIOUS LEADER

He's 30 years old. He is open-minded towards all religious beliefs. He has a degree in counseling and is good at helping people work out their differences.

Her husband is the engineer. She is 25 years old and seven months pregnant with her first child. The baby, a girl, is healthy. She loves children and runs her own in-home daycare.

THE ORPHAN CHILD

She's a 12-year-old girl who hopes to one day compete in the Olympics. She has been training as a gymnast since she was six. She is healthy, strong, and intelligent. She plans to become a professional athlete.

THE ENGINEER

His wife is the nurturer. He's 35. He and his wife are expecting their first baby. Although he is slow to adapt to new situations, he is known to work hard. If he says he will do something, people can count on it.

Students are challenged to grapple with the complexity of decision-making, promoting empathy and critical thinking as they navigate the moral complexities of choosing who lives and who dies. This nuanced approach encourages students to consider the multifaceted nature of human life and the weight of their choices.

Who lives? Who dies? They decide.

THE SCIENTIST
She is an internationally renowned geologist who studies rocks for NASA. She's a 55-year-old recent widow who has 15 children. She heavily
